ABSTRACT

The results of a survey of the New York Metropolitan Reference and Research Library Agency (METRO) and selected Association of Research Libraries (ARL) member-libraries concerning the selection tools they use the most frequently in acquiring new materials are tabulated in this guide. The categories covered by the survey are based on the Library of Congress Classification scheme. The 63 categories listed in the guide are arranged alphabetically, with current tools (i.e., periodicals) and books and miscellaneous tools listed separately for each subject category. The tabulations indicate the number of libraries responding for each category and the number of libraries which noted use of each tool listed. Also included are a list of participating ARL and New York Metropolitan libraries, a list of the Metropolitan Reference and Research Agency task force members who worked on the survey, and a list of the categories covered in the guide. PREFACE

In December 1978 a task force of METRO'S Resources Development Committee undertook the responsibility of developing and publishing "A Guide to Selection Tools," the preliminary draft of which was prepared by a subcommittee on Selection Tools of the Collection Development Committee, ALA/RTSD/RS. As their work progressed the members of the METRO task force became convinced that the existence of annotated guides such as the 5th edition of Carter, Bonk and Magrill's Building Library Collections obviated the need to revise and publish the annotated component of the ALA preliminary draft. In the process of developing the Guide, however, the task force had surveyed METRO member libraries and a select number of Association of Research Libraries in order to identify the selection tools they use most frequently. That information has been compiled and is presented here as the Subject Guide to Selection Tools: The Most Frequently Used Selection Tools Cited by Members of METRO and Selected ARL Members.

The task force survey questionnaire consisted of a list of subject categories based upon the LC classification outline. For each subject the libraries were asked to list three to five selection tools (primarily journals) in the English language used most frequently or found most useful in their libraries. Respondents were urged to include, rather than omit, any useful nonjournal source, e.g., a newspaper or a retrospective list. All 98 member libraries of METRO and 15 ARL libraries selected by the Association were surveyed. The response rate was 39.8 percent, with 33 METRO members and 12 ARL libraries returning completed questionnaires. Task force members felt that the results of this survey would be of interest and perhaps helpful to the library community at large.

The Guide is arranged by subject, with "Current" tools and "Books and Miscellaneous" tools listed for each subject category. "Current" is defined as a publication that appears more frequently than annually. All titles cited were verified by task force members. The total number of respondents for each subject and the number citing each tool are identified.

The results of the survey are presented here with no evaluation of the selection tools cited. (For evaluative information, the reader is referred to the Carter, Bonk and Magrill work cited earlier or to Katz, Magazines for Libraries. Rather, it is the purpose of this publication to report descriptively current selection practices in a substantial sample of metropolitan New York libraries as well as of major national university libraries. Readers are encouraged to use this subject guide as a starting point from which to select the most appropriate tools for the particular needs of their own libraries.
